

From the Editor

IN THIS ISSUE

This special issue follows the pattern set by Scriptura 2 and 5 in supplementing our regular editions with more technical papers. Dr David Clark and Dr Jan de Waard have been actively involved in Bible translation over a period of several years, working with the United Bible Societies as Translation Consultants. We are happy to provide a forum for their extended analysis of the discourse structure of Matthew. This study also fits in well with the project on the structure of Matthew initiated by the NT Society of South Africa and completed this year. (The analysis of Mt 1-13 has been published in Neotestamentica 11 (1977) and Mt 14-28 will appear in Neotestamentica 16 (1982). We trust that the present issue will contribute to the ongoing research in this field. Comments and criticism are welcomed and should be sent either directly to the authors at the addresses given below, or to the Editor.

INTRODUCING TWO CATEGORIES OF SUBSCRIPTION

Because of the varied interest of our readers, special issues will henceforth be published in a separate series, commencing with this number as S(pécial) 1. Consequently, our readers will have the choice of two categories of subscription:

Subscription A: Comprising all editions, including special issues

Subscription B: Comprising regular editions only.

Subscribers will be asked to indicate their preference in due course. The rate will be the same for each of the two categories and will still be based on a unit of three consecutive issues.
