

REDASIONEEL

Die bydraes in hierdie uitgawe hou almal verband met uitlegteoretiese, eksegetiese en vertalingsprobleme, en weerspieël die toename in belangstelling in hierdie aspekte van die interpretasie van Bybelse materiaal. In 'n situasie wat gekenmerk word deur die uiteenlopende wyse waarop die Bybel gelees en verstaan word, is dit belangrik om aan hierdie hermeneutiese kwessies aandag te gee.

Sekere veranderinge in die opset van Scriptura (wat onder andere die toevoeging van 'n internasionale redaksieraad insluit) is ophande, en ons hoop om in die volgende uitgawe meer besonderhede aan lesers bekend te maak.

FROM THE EDITOR

Contributions to this issue focus on problems of exegesis, translation and interpretation theory, and reflect the growing interest in matters of this nature. In a situation where the same biblical text can produce widely diverging readings, it is important that the hermeneutical issues raised by such diversity should receive the necessary attention.

Certain changes in the editorial set-up of Scriptura (including the announcement of an international advisory board) are being finalised at the moment, and we hope to give our readers more information about this in the next issue.
